Canine Sense of Neglect.

The dog concerning which the following incident is written is a thoroughbred Chinese bull and is very intelligent.

Her hair is very short and she feels the cold greatly. Nights she is allowed to have her bed in the sitting room and has an old cape for a covering. Frequently the cape gets off and then she sobs and cries like a child until some one gets up and covers her up again.

A few nights ago the coal fire in the sitting room went out. She came to my room three times to make me understand that the fire was out and she was cold. I pretended not to hear her but watched to see what she would do. After the third attempt she went back to the stove, walked around it, looked at and smelling of it, then looked back to my room in utter disgust, apparently. She then picked up her cape, and, shaking it viciously, flung it as hard as she could on the floor; then sat down on top of it with a thud that said as plainly as words: "Well, if I must freeze, I may as well begin."—Our Dumb Animals.

HORSE OWNERS

Should Read This Article And Be Kind to Dumb Animals.

Translated from the Swedish

To Thee, my Master, I offer my prayer:

Feed me, and take care of me. Be kind to me. Do not jerk the reins; do not whip me when going up hill.

Never strike, beat, or kick me, when I fail to understand what you want of me, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I refuse to do your bidding, see if there is not something wrong with my harness.

Do not give me too heavy loads; never hitch me where water will drip on me. Keep me well shod. Examine my teeth when I fail to eat; I may have an ulcerated tooth. That, you know, is very painful. I am unable to tell you in words when I am sick; so watch me, and I will try to tell you by signs.

Pet me sometimes; I enjoy it and I will learn to love you.

Protect me in summer from the hot sun. Keep a blanket on me in winter weather, and never put a frosty bit in my mouth, but hold it in your hand a moment first.

I carry you, pull you, wait patiently for you long hours, day or night. I cannot tell you when I am thirsty; give me clean, cool water often in hot weather.

Finally, when my strength is gone, instead of turning me over to a human brute, to be tortured and starved, take my life in the easiest and quickest way, and your God will reward you in this life and in Heaven. Amen.

Southern Progress.

Discussing the progress and prospects of the South, former Gov. William A. MacCorkle, of West Virginia, expresses the opinion that in twenty-five years the wealth of the South "will approximate the figures of the whole country of today."

The South, he says, has more hardwood, more coal, greater fields of gas and, excepting the lakes, larger deposits of iron ore than any other section; in addition there are lead, marble, salt and fire clay in limitless quantities; the other sections of the country have depleted the natural supplies, while the coal lands of the South are just scratched, the great forests are just hearing the stroke of the ax, the immense beds of iron ore in many cases are just beginning to be touched by the workman's pick.

In ten years, Mr. MacCorkle says, Pennsylvania will not ship a pound of her coal to the South; she will need it all, "and the great deposits of Alabama, Kentucky, West Virginia and Arkansas are beginning their great mission of supplying the world and increasing the wealth of the South."

He refers to rice growing in Arkansas and fruit production in the upper South. One great factor for Southern development, he says, will be the opening up of Central and South America, Central Africa, China and the East. The completion of the Isthmian canal "will practically place the South along the line of the greatest trade route in the world."

Fear of Aeroplanes.

When Zeppelin III. made the flight from Dusseldorf to Essen, it was observed that horses and cattle ran wildly about the meadow as it approached and sheep crowded with loud bleating around their shepherd. From these facts Count Zeppelin concludes that the employment of airships will have a disastrous effect on furred and feathered game. All animals show fear at their approach. Partridges and other game birds cower and hide themselves, and domestic cocks utter warning crows as if they perceive some gigantic bird of prey. Van Houken, the Swedish aeronaut, when at a moderate height, watched elk, foxes, hares and other animals take to flight and dogs rushed howling into the houses.—Deutsche Jager-Zeitung.

RESCUES MOTHER.

Devotion of Pony Rewarded By Spectators at Ball Game.

A Shetland pony figured in the rescue of its mother, as reported from Pleasant Hill, Mo:

"At a ball game here recently the attention of the crowd was attracted to a pretty Shetland colt, which approached the bleachers from the direction of a creek, two hundred yards beyond first base. The Shetland baby appeared to be in trouble. Various people on the lines fondled the little fellow, and presently it turned and retraced its way to the creek. At the edge of the creek bluff it paused for an instant, and after looking intently over the brink, it wheeled about once more and returned to the right-field bleachers. Two young men noticed the unusual actions of the colt and when it once more turned and started for the creek they followed. The mystery was explained when they looked over the bluff, for there, mired in deep mud, with her head barely out of the water, was the little bay mother of the Shetland colt. Other persons were summoned to the scene and willing hands soon delivered the little mare from her predicament."—Our Dumb Animals.

Can Punish an Inspector of Election.

The Court of Appeals held that an inspector of election is liable for prosecution who shall mutilate, deface or spoil ballots after they have been voted. W. M. Goulet, an inspector, was indicted for spoiling a Democratic ballot in the recent Circuit Judge's race in Kenton county by stamping a cross also under the Republican emblem. The lower court dismissed him on peremptory instructions on the ground that an inspector is not an election officer and cannot be punished under the statute.
